Common Community Safety and Well-Being Risks
Community Safety and Well-Being Plan for York Region

Research and engagement so far has helped scope risks in York Region

The term risks is used in this type of work to refer to negative characteristics or conditions in individuals, families, communities or society that may increase likelihood of harms. These could include things like systemic discrimination, crime, victimization, addiction, drug overdose, suicide, and other prescribed risks (Police Services Act, 1990).

A literature review and jurisdictional scan were carried out to identify common risks identified in community safety and well-being plans in Canada and internationally (United States, United Kingdom and Australia). This list of common risks was refined through engagement with internal subject matter experts at York Region, Human Services Planning Board of York Region (Advisory Committee) and local municipal staff to identify what potential risks may be most relevant across York Region. Potential risks are also aligned with goals in Vision 2051, social determinants of health, and risks identified in the Risk-driven Tracking Database for York Region.

Potential risks in York Region are set out in Table 1. Work is already underway to address some of these risks in York Region. As such, Table 1 also highlights some examples of existing York Region and York Regional Police (YRP) programs that can be leveraged in developing a Community Safety and Well-Being Plan.
